RAINBARREL ART TRAIL

Rainbarrel Art Silent Auction
10am, closes at 3:45 pm
Bid on your favorite Rainbarrel Art!

RainwaterRevival.com

The Rainwater Revival 2012 will feature a collection of 55-gallon rain barrels transformed into functional works of art by Hill Country artists. You can view all of the 2012 "art barrels" at RainwaterRevival.com.

These barrels will offered to the public via a "Silent Auction" at the Rainwater Revival on Oct 27 in Boerne. The silent auction closes at 3:45pm. Contact us at info@RainwaterRevival.org to "buy it now" for $1,000.

Proceeds go to fund a Hill Country Alliance school grant program for water conservation and rainwater catchment education.

"It's Raining Whimsy"

Aesop Cardenas

www.facebook.com/aesop.art

Characters from childhood delight you on this rainbarrel art. Is that a sock rabbit? You cannot help but smile when you look at this design. and when it fills up with water, your plants will be smiling too, as you water them with this pure and wonderful water.

"Wildflowers in the Rain"

Dianne Koelher

<http://wonderfulartscrafts.blogspot.com/>

"I have been inspired by how beautiful the countryside looks when blanketed in flowers that live only on rainwater. As a decorative painter, flowers are one of my favorite subjects to paint."

Location: HEB, Boerne

"Deep in the Rainforest"

Dripping Springs High School National Honor Society, (Jay Bates, DSHS art teacher.)

Talented students who worked on the project are Morgane Xenos, Camile & Sophia Shroeder, Kristin Kish, Rachel Clarke, Shannon McCurdy, Brandon Campos, Mica Carson, Vashfi Bester, Jenna Cox, Rachel Meeks, & Joey Rodan.

"Amazing Succulents"

Wendy Little

"I chose succulents because they are the perfect little water conservationists. They store water in their leaves, their stems and also in their roots. They are charming to look at. I love the colors and and all of the different variations. When they hold water on their leaves it looks like diamonds!"

Location: Boerne Visitors' Center

"Texas Balloons"

Kathleen McElwaine

<http://www.kmcelwaine.com/>

"This is taken from my painting of Prickly Pear that I enjoy very much. I was inspired by the beautiful natural growth of the Prickly Pear in the Hill Country of Texas."

Location: Cibolo Nature Center

"Let the Water Come"

Taylor Dueker

<http://www.taylordueker.com/>

Using his architectural background, Taylor created an "aqueduct in the round" with his rain barrel art. If you look at all sides, you see the aqueduct bringing water into the barrel, as surely as your gutters will bring water into your barrel.

"If it Keeps on Raining"

Felicia Ristaino

Felicia Ristaino paints to the feeling & mood. Under the moonlight, with music filling the space, she imagines the pouring of Texas water over a scorched earth. The strokes imitate the rush of native water over the hard surface and conjure the spirit of growth and fluidity.
